VINTAGE PHOTOGRAPHS OF 1968

By Lysie Roberts, January 10, 2018

A new exhibition at New York's Steven Kasher Gallery examines the political activism and cultural shifts of 1968 – a landmark year for both. Methodically, an image made on each day of the year has been selected, to reflect key news stories and important, unfolding events. The resulting collection, comprising black and white news photographs sourced from American press agencies, has been framed in a calendar grid, where we find photographs of Robert F. Kennedy's assassination, anti-war movements, Black Power affirmations, the Beatles' White Album debut, equal rights conferences, and portraits of protestors across the world. Until 24 February.
