DO THIS

New York City. Shawn Walker @ Kasher Gallery. Founded in 1963, The Kamoinge Workshop provided crucial support and solidarity for Black photographers and other artists and played a key role in having their work exposed outside of their respective communities. Shawn Walker, one of the founding members of this collective is the subject of a new retrospective at the Steven Kasher Gallery. Covering over 30 years, Walker work captures the local Black experience using abstractionism, surrealism, social documentary and street photography. It's a stunning display of images that highlights the work of a seminal artist. Shawn Walker will be at the Kasher Gallery through February 24th.
